Miscellaneous.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

From Blackwood's Magazine.

Here is perpetual winter—here the cold hand of death keeps down rebellious spirits that brooked not the supremacy of kings, and forbids alike monarchs further to oppress, or slaves longer to succumb—all base earth, royal, noble, gentle and simple. Kings, warriors, what are they here but cowards and slaves! What is all that is left of the greatest, mightiest, and best of them worth? old bones, five pounds for two pence. Above these bones what remains to do them honor? a cold stone; a noiseless block; a cherub blubbering, fame blowing, a noiseless trumpet, an epitaph recording every virtue—they had not.

And after all, was it not for the honor of being deposited in the lofty and well proportioned bone-house, that the crumbling dust below these marbles kept the world in hot water? We stamp upon the wall where lies all that the rats have left of Elizabeth our queen, and the reverberated sound quivers around the tomb of her sister and her victim, Mary of Scotland. Did the heartless old woman dream she would rot in the next cellar?

"Drop upon Fox's tomb a tear,

an' if it will, where was the use of those men keeping at such a mortal distance, and interchanging words of high defiance through life, when death lays them here, at heads and tails, like beggars in St. Giles's? We are here, and we tell you, Edward the Confessor; Richard the Second, Elizabeth and the rest of the royal skeletons—and you, meaner phrosphates of dukes, princes, field-marshals, of the red, courtiers, ministers of state—and you, also, crackskulls of Poets' Corner—that the humble individual who has the honor to address you—we, even we, the warm blood careering merrily through the blue veins; our osteology kept together by sinewy ligaments, wrapt in warm surtouts, of good stout muscle, and covered with its appropriate cuticle; able to move about and go wither we list, take the air, hear the lark carol, and look at the sunbeams dancing on the rippling waters; yea, we consider ourself worthier, greater, mightier than ye all!

Hark in your ear, Bess, down below—can you sign our death warrant? We should rather think not old lady! Where are your lying poets, idolatrous courtiers, your pet dogs of humanity, your two legged poodles, yea, and your wise men—where is that old muff, Burleigh; where honest Walsingham; where courtly Leicester; where gallant Essex, and still more gallant Raleigh? Where is Anthony Rudd, who preached before you, and told you that "age had furrowed your face, and besprinkled your hair with its meal?" Where are all the poor wretches you put to death, o'ye hear?

No answer.

Lie still, ye unimportant, useless dead: what are ye now more than meanest dust? The present crier of the court at Westminster over the way, is of more moment in the eyes of men than the whole lot of ye—yea even the live beedle of Pancras parish is more gorgeous, and Coroner Walkey oftener in the mouth of men. What had you in life more than I am now? power to abuse it—flattery to be befolded in the ear with—and pomp to contrast with the dark, dark hole wherein are stowed away your miserable relics. Bah! let me live—as long as I can, as well as I can; and as contented as I can; let me thank God for what I have, which is better to me than all your subterraneous majesties and graces ever had; be yours the preterite, mine the present and the future tenses; and when death comes for his debt, what can befal me worse than to be like you—buried and forgotten? Where will be then, in brief, the difference between us? no more than this—you rot within, and I without, Westminster Abbey.

To come down a pew or two leaving meditations to Harvey, who understood that sort of thing the Abbey, is a pleasant lounge in warm, or we should rather say very hot weather: then, it is of the temperature of an ordinary ice-house, and with a pair of cork soles a muffler, and a scull-cap—without which no one who does not wish to join company with the the illustrious dead should enter the fane, we can get on very pleasantly, depositing your hat and cane with a foolish-faced, whisker-fringed man in a black gown in Poet's Corner, you dangle about, looking at the tomb of John Dryden, observing by the way, that the nobleman who had the honor of contributing the stone—a Duke of Buckingham, we believe, has had his own name cut in letters as large as those of the great man he professes to commemorate: this is like the picture of Jacky Tar going to heaven holding on a bishop's tail!

Whitebread, the brewer, put up a bust of Milton in Cripplegate Church, but he had the good taste, not to inscribe beneath it "put up here by Whitebread the brewer;" however, when a duke does a handsome thing, he has a right to take care that his merits shall be handsomely acknowledged.

In that corner behold the chastest tablet and best inscription in the church.

O RARE BEN JOHNSON.

There is the tablet to the memory of poor Goldsmith, the profile of the poet, a true Hibernian profile, by the way, with the inscription from the pen of the great Sam Johnson; then, there is the monument to Shakespeare, and Prior, and Gay, and—but a batch has by this time been collected, and you are desired to move onward, stopping only to deposit your "tizzy" on the tomb of some defunct Abbot, who has the perpetual clank of silver rattling in his ear—pity the good old soul cannot hear it—and you are free of the house. The guides as we have said, conduct you at such a rapid rate, that you have no time to admire or think over what you see: in fact, each chapel would occupy with pleasure an entire day, and that of Henry VII, you would hardly thoroughly exhaust in two: when the guides leave you, however, you can stroll more at leisure through the body of the church; and if you have a sentimental fellow-meditator, one who will not talk but who will think with you, there is no greater pleasure of the calm, contemplative kind, than flitting from tomb to tomb, and pausing to recall wandering recollections of the doing in the flesh of the mouldering tenants below. As the effect of contrast, you cannot do better than spend the fore part of your day in Westminster Hall, amid the rush of witnesses and clients, but bustle of attorneys.

The tedious form, the solemn pate,
The pert dispute, the dull debate,
The drowsy bench, the babbling hall—

and then walk across the way to the Abbey. The vanity of all human ambitions cannot be more forcibly illustrated. In the Hall, you see learned gentlemen in wigs, crowing, arguing and combatting like rival bantams for fame. You see hords—perfect swarms of the briefless, condemned for life to look on while other meh are eating; or, what is an hudred fold worse, to listen, while other men are speaking, for the hopeless thirst of fame. You behold awful, eminent Judges on the bench, representing years of midnight anxiety and toil, employed in reaching that envied elevation, for the hope of fame. Half a minute's walk brings you to a silent city, where kings, heroes, beauties, titles, fortunes, sleep neglected—the sleep of death—no one remembering, caring for or troubling their heads about them. We behold in their tombs how petty is grandeur—beauty, how unsightly—fame, how obscure—fortune, how mean—and if, after this, we return to the legal arena, so far from seeing any thing admirable, or mighty, or great, we behold a little busy hive of stinging, unprofitable creatures, humming and droning away their little lives, and leaving no more lasting memories behind them than the drones of the hives of lesser insects.

MORAL ASPECTS OF OUR POLITICS.—The municipal authorities of Boston have done the country a service in publishing the Oration delivered before them on the 4th of July, by the Hon. Horace Mann, late President of the Massachusetts Senate. It is a lesson of fearful interest for the nation. The condition, prospects, and perils of the great experiment in progress here, about which there is so much glorification, are surveyed with the honest fidelity of a true patriot. Every page bears the vivid impress of truth and patriotism: and all eyes that are not hopelessly blinded cannot fail here to see that, however great we may be as a nation, "a vast accession to the common stock of intelligence and virtue" is indispensable to the permanence of our Republic—that "our existing means for the promotion of intelligence and virtue" are too inadequate to the support of a Republican Government.

We propose to lay the evidence of these positions before our readers, but are restricted to-day to a single extract, and that concerning the universal exercise of the right of suffrage: "The number of convicts at present in confinement, in the penitentiaries and state prisons of the Union, is very nearly 4,750; and the average duration of their imprisonment is about four years. The number under sentence for crime, in common jails and houses of correction, is not less than the preceding, and the average length of their imprisonment is estimated at six months. Suppose that these culprits live, on an average, but eight years after their enlargement; and we have the appalling number of 25,500 convicted criminals—proved offenders against the laws of God and man—almost universally adults—at large, mingling in our society, and a very large portion of them competent to vote; there being but three States in the Union, where, by the constitution of the State, a conviction for felony, or any infamous offence, works a forfeiture of the elective franchise. Yes! voters, good and true—for the wrong side, and to send you and me to perdition! And I do not believe there is one State in the Union, whose elections for governor and other high officers, have not, sometimes been so nearly a drawn game, that its quota of this felon host—its own battalion of sin,—would not have been able to decide them, by what a politician would call—a very respectable majority.

I have somewhere seen the number of atheists—of Abner Kneeland's men—in the United States, stated fearfully high; but upon what authority, or after what extent and accuracy of investigation, I am not able to say. These are all men—if not voters: for, thank Heaven, the female heart is untenantable by atheism. But a fact, far more important than the number of theoretical atheists, is, the number of practical atheists—of those who live without God in the world—who have neither faith nor practice, respecting the existence, and immutability, and the inevitable execution of the Divine Laws. I say the number of practical atheists is the question of greater importance; for who can live in this world and mingle with its people, and not be more and more deeply impressed, day by day, with the divine wisdom of the criterion, "By their fruits ye shall know them?" Actions are fruits, while pharisaical professions are only gilded signs or placards, hung upon thistles and thornbushes, saying, "Ho, all ye, we bear figs and grapes!"

In this review, I pass by those combinations of ignorance and false teaching, which lead to Mormonism, and Millerism, and Perfectionism. I pass by that reckless and flagitious spirit, which on the Canadian border, lately came so near to involving us in a conflict with the most powerful nation on earth. I pass by our treatment of the aborigines. I pass by such an event as the Florida war, which has already cost this nation more than thirty millions of dollars; and which is it notorious, was instigated by desperadoes, because it promised to prove for them, as it has proved, a more lucrative business than other modes of swindling or depredation.

With irrepressible, but unspeakable joy, I pass by the hundreds of thousands of inebriates, who, so, lately, lay weltering upon the sea of Intemperance; yet who, periodically, were rafted up, by political partisans—as men raft up float-wood—to drop their foul votes into the ballot box, and elect the rulers of a self called free and Christian people; these do I gladly pass by, for the waters of that deluge the subsiding; and already thousands and tens of thousands--yea, more than ten times ten thousand—have found an Ararat on the terra firma of Abstinence.

Fellow Citizens—from this glimpse—this mere bird's eye view—of our intellectual and moral condition, I do not hesitate to affirm, that our republican edifice at this time—in present fact and truth—is not sustained by those columns of solid and ever during adamant—intelligence and virtue. Its various parts are only just clinging together by that remarkable cohesion—that mutual bearing and support, which unsound portions of a structure may impart to each other; and which, as every mechanic well knows, will for a time, hold the rotten materials of an edifice together, although not one of its timbers could support its own weight; and unless, therefore, a new superstructure can be placed beneath every buttress and angle of this boasted Temple of Liberty, it will soon totter and fall, and bury all indwellers in its ruins.

And what, I again ask, are we doing to impart soundness and permanency to that which we profess so much to value and admire?—We all bear witness that there is but one salvation for the State—the knowledge of duty and the will to do it, among the people. But what means are we taking to cause that will to be quickened into life, in every breast? We all agree—the universal experience and history of mankind being our authority—that in nineteen cases out of every twenty, if the human mind ever is to be expanded by knowledge and imbued with virtuous principles, it must be done during the susceptible years of childhood and youth. But when we come to the sine qua non—to the work—to the point where volition must issue forth into action, or it is valueless; when we come to the taxing, to the building, to the books, to the apparatus, to the whole system of preparatory and contemporaneous measures for carrying on, and perfecting the work of education; where wishes and sympathy and verbal encouragement are nothing without the effective co-operation of those muscles which perform labor and transfer money; when we come to this point, then excuses teem, and the well wishers retire from the stage, like actors at the close of a drama. I gladly acknowledge that there are honorable exceptions, in all ranks and classes of men; and in no state in the Union, are there so many of these exceptions, as in Massachussets; and yet, even there, is it not most extensively true, that when we appeal to the different classes and occupations of men, we meet with indifference, if not with repulse?

PERILS OF THE SEA.

The Salem Mercury of Wednesday morning states that the ship Sumatra, from Salem, arrived at Batavia, May 3d. A letter from the Captain states that on the 21st of April off Java head, he saw a vessel in distress, ran down, and discovered it to be the British bark Kilmers, of Glasgow, and to his astonishment, the only person he saw was a female, who appeared frantic with despair.—The captain sent a boat and took her on board the Sumatra.

She was a young lady, eighteen years of age, the wife of Capt. Smith of the bark—she stated that the Kilmers left Batavia two months previous, for Europe; that soon after leaving, the crew mutined, and came near killing the captain (her husband), and herself—but the captain finally succeded in securing them below in different parts of the ship—and endeavored, with only two boys to assist him to work the ship back to Batavia, and the morning previous to her meeting them, she missed her husband and the boys. She thought that a part of the crew in the night had freed themselves, and thrown the captain and the boys overboard, and taken the boat and pulled for the land.

In 20 minutes after she got on board the "Sumatra," I perceived by the aid of my glass, the men crawling from the hatches and liberating each other; they then ran aft, and put her 'helm hard up,' and her head sails filled—I immediately 'filled away' the 'Sumatra" and gathering headway very quick, enabled us to avoid them. They tacked several times after us—the next morning she was 15 miles to leeward. The Dutch Government took care of the lady, as there is no English Consul here.

A RESIGNATION.

POST OFFICE, Milo, Yates Co N. Y. }
August 24th, 1842. }

To the Hon. P. M. General:

Sir—On the 25th ult. I addressed you, but have no answer in return.

I received the appointment of Post Master at Milo from your worthy predecessor, the Hon. Francis Granger, who only required of me bonds for the faithful discharge of the duties of the office. The post now appears to be "coupled" with conditions "having no affinity to each other," but "wholly incongruous in their character." For instance, I understand Post Masters have been removed for expressing their political opinions, on the plea that they are required not to interfere in politics; while on the other hand most of us have received a circular from New York, urging us to aid the views of the "Administration General Committee." I am further advised, from high authority, that Post Masters are specially directed where and how to advertise their "List of Letters."

Now, sir, wishing to retain the privilege I inherited as an American citizen, of expressing my views freely on all subjets, the Tariff and Mr. Tyler included, and being unable, were I disposed, to further the views of the "General Committee" before mentioned, for want of material, there being none in this county—and construing dictation in the advertising of a few letters, as galling, if not tyrannical; I do again for these reasons, together with the edict of the Madisonian, most cheerfully submit to you my resignation, and pray the speedy appointment of a more complying Deputy. I am, Sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. W. HAZARD.

Hon. C. A. Wickliffe.

THE PRESIDENCY.

So far, the discussion of the Presidential question, and the presentation of candidates for nomination, have all been in a spirit that promises the best results. A state or personal partiality for one candidate, has not sought its gratification by the disparagement of another.—Albany Argus.

We think differently—we know differently: the writer of the above had not, perhaps, seen the recent articles on the subject in the New York Evening Post, and the demonstrations in one or two suborned papers in Alabama.

We predict that in less than six months Mr. Calhoun will be read out of the Democratic ranks by the "Regency party," if the ability is possessed to do it. It is decreed by some few "leaders" that the North shall not support a "Free trade" man—and will the South have nothing to say in the matter?

We detest schisms, but we see very plainly that these "leaders" will "rule or ruin." They will not rule.—Madisonian.

VIRGINIA BANKS.—On the 15th instant, less than a fortnight hence, the Virginia Banks will resume specie payments in full for all their issues. The approach of this event has had the effect of gradually improving the rates of exchange between Baltimore and Virginia, until they have reached a healthful condition. Yesterday drafts on Richmond, Petersburg, &c. were at 1 per cent, discount, and Bank notes at 1¼ a 1½ per cent. discount. Notes of the Wheeling Banks were at a discount of 4½ a 5 per cent. We observe that the Wheeling papers quote exchange on the East at 3 per cent. premium.—Balt. Amer.

The Madisonian complains that "the Whigs will grant no terms to the President." That's a fact. He has one term——let him make the most of it; but terms are out of the question.—Louisville Jour.

RECEPTION IN PHILADELPHIA, OF WHIG MEMBERS OF CONGRESS.

The Philadelphia U. S. Gazette, has a full and glowing account of the reception given by the Whigs of Philadelphia to the Whig members of Congress who reached that city on Thursday afternoon. The steamboat Ohio was despatched from Philadelphia to Wilmington, with a large Committee, to meet and receive the members at the latter place. About one o'clock, P. M. they were received on board the Ohio, when Mr. Gibons, on behalf of the Philadelphia Committee, gave them a cordial welcome, and was replied to by Mr. Saltonstall of Massachusetts, on behalf of his colleagues. While the boat was on her way up the Delaware, the party sat down to an elegant dinner. Before adjourning to the upper deck, Mr. Gibbons arose, and after some appropriate remarks, offered the following toast:

"The Whig Delegation in Congress. Firm in their political faith—steadfast and true to the interests of their country."

Mr. Tallmadge, of New York, rose in reply and after briefly speaking, closed with saying that he could not possibly offer a better toast than.

"The life, and soul, and perfect embodiment of Whig principles—Henry Clay"

The cheers were loud and long which greeted this welcome offering, and were renewed again and again with perfect enthusiasm of spirit.

The Gazette then goes on to say—

The passengers when passing Fort Mifflin were gratified by a salute of thirteen guns from the fort. It was answered, by the guns on board, and loud and spontaneous cheers.—As the boat neared the city and the shipping and wharves became visible, a goodly prospect was presented in the ships, gaily dressed with flags, and wharves lined with people, who cheered the vessel on her course. Dock street wharf showed but one dense mass of figures, and, as the boat passed, a mighty cheer arose from them, dying away, only to be succeeded by another, and another, from the different points along the front of the city at times mingled with the roar of cannon from the vessels and the wharves. In this way with the ringing shouts of thousands following the noble vessel, the front of the city was passed and repassed, to the wharf at Dock street, which was so densely crowded, that it was with the utmost difficulty that a landing could be effected. The members were finally seated in carriages, and a line of procession formed, headed by mounted Marshals under the command of Gen A. M. Provost, and from the wharf the whole body proceeded to the Museum.

At the Museum, the committee of twelve assembled, and awaited the arrival of the procession.—When the first carriage reached the place, it halted, and the inmates alighted, and were admitted to the Hall, and thus it was with each carriage. After all the members of Congress were conducted to the staging all the east end of the room, the doors were opened, and the people admitted. In a few minutes the vast Hall was crowded. The beautiful jet d'eau, which had been playing, was stopped, and the Hon. John Sergeant, the chairman of the Committee of Twelve, called the audience to order.

Mr. C. Gibons, the chairman of the Committee of Reception, then reported that they had been to Wilmington, received the members of Congress, and discharged generally the duties devolved upon them, and had now the pleasure of saying that Senators and Representatives from fifteen States were present.

Whereupon, Mr. Sergeant announced the fact to the meeting, and proceeded to bid the Congressmen welcome, in the name of the Whigs in the city and county of Philadelphia, in nearly the following language:

Fellow Whigs, Members of the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The Whigs of the City and County of Philadelphia have requested me to express to you the great pleasure they feel in meeting you here at this time, and on their behalf to bid you a hearty welcome. With all my heart I obey their will. Infinite satisfaction it gives me to be the organ of that will, notwithstanding the unavoidable conviction that words are inadequate to express their sense of your deserving, or to tell you how glad they are to have the opportunity to take you by the hand. Articulate language fails, but joy, and gratitude and affectionate pride, are furnished with an utterance of deeper and intelligible sympathy, and of unquestionable truth. What you have seen, and what you have heard, and what, may I not add, you have felt—the rushing of the Whigs to meet you, the warm and joyous enthusiasm of their reception, the loud cheers that have accompanied you—these are the spontaneous and honest outbursts of the heart, which the monarch on his throne may covet in vain, and the power of patronage cannot command. They can only obtain a miserable imitation—a feeble, hypocritical counterfeit coinage—no more like the truth than base flattery is like the counsels of sincere friendship.

You and your worthy associates, whom we would have rejoiced to see with you, if the calls of duty elsewhere had allowed—you and your worthy associates, the Whigs of both houses of Congress, are the only men in the world who will enquire—why this unusual manifestation? Every other Whig heart in the Union has answered the question. You have withstood temptation and trial. You have endured anxiety and labor; you have submitted to privations, and you have risked reproach; influenced only by a sense of public duty, you have stood at your posts, like men and patriots, and achieved a triumph for your country. We honor you for your integrity, for your fortitude, for your wisdom and persevering devotion, we honor you, for the singleness of purpose with which you kept always in view the great interests of the nation, for the sacrifice of personal feelings, under just excitement, and the elevated disregard of every provocation. We honor you for the sacred respect you have shown yourselves, and endeavored to compel in others, for the Constitution, the great security of all that is precious, and for your manly and energetic and determined exertion to maintain unimpaired the popular representative feature in that venerated instrument. In a word we honor you and all your Whig associates, in both Houses of Congress, as the champions of the Whig cause, worthy of the name and worthy of the inheritance descended from the Whigs of 1776.

Once more, I bid you a hearty welcome, with all our thanks, confident that the unanimous voice of the Whigs of the nation will every where greet you and your Whig associates, in the same accents.

A single additional word, and I have done. Your duty has been faithfully and fully performed. You have kept the Whig standard triumphant and unsullied. The Whigs of the Union must now rally to its support. Every Whig must do his duty as you have done yours, and it will continue to float in triumph. Will they not follow your examples? Who can doubt it?

After Mr. Sergeant had concluded his address, during which he was repeatedly interrupted by huzzas, and occasionally by a cry of "three cheers for John Sergeant," the meeting called for several members, but the Hon. T. M. McKennan, of Washington, Pa. appeared in behalf of the members of Congress present, and expressed their warm acknowledgment of the kind reception given. He, however, soon, and most gratifyingly, slid into an account of the proceedings of Congress, and the thwartings which the Whigs had endured from the one man power. His history of the passage of the Tariff Bill was listened to with interest, and cheered with hearty zeal.

Mr. McKennan named three Whigs who had distinguished themselves by their zeal, and for the cause of the people. He named Mr. Fillmore, of New York, the Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, Mr. Thompson, of Indiana, and last, not least, Edward Stanly, of North Carolina. His name brought a thunder of applause. "That man," said he, "was restrained from voting in favor of the bill last presented, by the feelings, and almost direct instructions of his constituents. He did not vote at all. But when he saw that the vote of the Speaker would kill the bill, he forgot all—himself, his private views, his sectional prejudices—and remembered only his party and the nation and gave his vote, and thus saved the bill.

"It is not much for us, for members of Congress from the Middle States, or the Eastern States, to give a vote for the tariff, even if our constituents do not like it. But in the South, where prejudices have always prevailed against a tariff, the man who could thus come forward, and sustain his party, and the nation, by such a vote, deserved everlasting fame."

Mr. McK. then remarked that the Whigs had inscribed on their banner, a sound currency, protection to national industry, and the distribution of the proceeds of the public lands. "With that banner," said he, "we must succeed, and Henry Clay will bear it aloft."

The name of Henry Clay was received with deafening shouts—an enthusiasm that delighted all.

Amidst calls for various public speakers, the meeting adjourned, to meet in front of the Exchange at eight o'clock, it being then quite seven.

At the Exchange, in the evening, there was an immense gathering of the people. In the course of the evening, addresses were delivered to the crowds assembled in the Hall of the Exchange and in front of the building, by Messrs. Morehead, of Kentucky; Thompson, of Indiana; Halstead, of N. J; Stanly, of N. C.. Fillmore, of N. Y.; Underwood, of Ky.; King, of Georgia; Mathiot, of Ohio; Tallmadge, of N Y.; Tomlinson of Ky.; and Foster, of New York.

Lord ASHBURTON'S Speech, at the dinner lately given to him in New York.

Gentlemen,—In returning thanks for the honor you have done me, I apprehend it is not unusual in this country, as it is not certainly in the other, for a person in a similar situation, to apologize for his inability to express his feelings. I am aware that the reception you have given to the toast just read by your President, is directed more to the mission with which it has been my good fortune to be connected, than to myself individually. I assure you, gentlemen, no one could look with deeper feelings upon, or be more strongly impressed with, the importance of the subject with which my name has been intimately connected. Having passed a greater portion of my life in the commercial relations between England and America, I had hoped to have passed the evening of it in that quiet retirement, to which a long life of industry and activity entitled me; but when an opportunity offered of effecting that to which I had clung from my youth upwards, and the importance of which was deeply impressed upon my heart, viz. to keep together in the bonds of peace two great countries,—indeed I can hardly call them two, since they are one people though on different continents; (Great applause.) I say, when an opportunity offered to remove these difficulties, I could not refuse to come to this country to endeavor to effect the negotiation which has so happily terminated, and which has this day received your applause and approbation.

I cannot but consider it auspicious and singular, that the gentleman who is now presiding over you should be a descendant of that man whose patriotism and virtues will long be remembered. I allude to the late Mr. Jay, (immense cheering) who was entrusted with a treaty of peace, and succeeded under more adverse circumstances than I had to encounter. That service was performed when the nations were wild, when passions were afloat, and when the voice of the messenger of peace could with difficulty be heard. But his energies rose as the difficulties increased,—he supported the independence of the country, and stopt a serious war which was waging, and laid the foundation of the great commercial prosperity of America. (Immense cheering.)

I had less to contend with. When I look at the reception I met with from your President, from the government and the Senate, from the people of Boston—that cradle of liberty and independence, (Applause)—when as I have done to day, shaking hands with three thousand persons, brought together not by compulsion, but from their own free will, and a people not often brought together on such occasions—when I looked at this, I could not but ask myself, why should there be apprehension of war with this country? (Applause.) I have seen nothing which can lead me to anticipate any interruption of our good will and friendship. Though enjoying all those advantages, I am fully sensible of the fact, that difficulties may in time fester and become virulent sores, and therefore I cannot deny myself the satisfaction of feeling that "I have done the State some service." (Great cheering). Still looking at this, people having alike that vigor of intellect and character, who would desire them to be brought in collision with each other? At the same time, it has been a gratification to me, because the settlement and healing of these difficulties have been the result of the negotiation. (Applause.)

I may be unjustly assuming a position of merit, for I am bound to say I met with an earnest desire on the part of your Government to bring the subjects in dispute to an amicable adjustment. I am also bound to acknowledge also the assistance of that great man, for he is, and is acknowledged to be by all the world, your present Secretary of State,—distinguished, as we all know, for the highest description of talent—(tremendous cheering)—and I only regret that accidental circumstances prevent his attending your dinner, as his eloquence would do more justice and honor to the occasion upon which we have met.

Gentlemen, I can only say that I feel the highest gratification in this company, composed, as it is of most respectable citizens, connected with the great operations of commerce, and I shall retain a grateful recollection of the reception with which you have honored me. It is said, from the observations of age, that the scenes and recollections of our earlier life are the most treasured in the memory in our later years, but of all the recollections I shall carry to the grave, there is nothing superior to that last act which brought me here, and which has so successfully terminated.

His lordship was deeply affected as he concluded, and sat down amidst loud and prolonged cheering.

Mr. Tyler has, at last, been utterly 'headed.' He vetoed the "little Tariff;" he has signed the Big Tariff. He has assented to a bill which his great ally, Mr. Calhoun, denounces as the most Protective of Tariffs. He has vetoed a Land bill, to which he had no Constitutional objection, and he has signed a Revenue bill, which overthrows the Compromise and all those Constitutional principles to which he has ever boasted of adhering, in regard to the Tariff.

IN SENATE, SEPT. 2, 1842.

At the close of the debate on the new Tariff Bill, Mr. Sevier addressed the Senate somewhat in the language reported in the Globe of the 29th ultimo; saying, in substance, "that Captain Tyler had whipped the Whigs—that they were conquered—had been defeated in every thing, and were now about to surrender to the Captain the only remaining stock (the distribution of the proceeds of the public lands) of the great concern of Whiggery," &c. and he tauntingly tendered "his sympathy to his Whig friends—was sorry for them—and offered to give them his certificate that they voted for the Tariff Bill then pending very reluctantly," &c.

To all this Mr. Crittenden replied with spirit and effect. He said, among other things, that it might seem ungrateful not to make some acknowledgement to the gentleman for his proffered sympathies and certificates. The tone and manner of the gentleman sufficiently indicated, however, the feeling of triumph in which he spoke, and showed how he gloried in and secretly approved those Presidential Vetoes by which he appeared to suppose the Whigs to be overthrown. The Whigs, Mr. C. said, had just cause to suspect that the gentleman and his political associates were instigators of those Vetoes, and engaged in some sort of alliance with Mr. Tyler which it was not thought safe to avow: and the gentleman ought to be a little more cautious in manifesting sympathies with the Captain, as he called him, lest it might become necessary for him to procure certificates to prove that he was not himself a Tyler man.

The Whigs, Mr. C said, stood in no need of the sympathy of the honorable gentleman. It was indeed true that they had great and unexpected difficulties and discouragements to encounter, great sacrifices to make, and great and virtuous resentments to suppress: but they had proved themselves equal to every trial, and superior to all adversaries. When obstructed and thwarted in one direction, they had collected themselves for another effort—and, amidst abuse and denunciation, had resolutely persevered to serve and SAVE their country.

The Whigs, yes, those Whigs to whom the Senator had been pleased to offer his sympathies, had conquered him and all his associates, and had carried through Congress every measure they had promised or attempted; and, if the country is now suffering for want of any of those measures, it is not owing to any fault or failure of theirs. So far as depended on them, they had achieved every thing they attempted, and redeemed every pledge they made.

"It is true," continued Mr. Crittenden, "that the distribution of the proceeds of the sales of the public lands is a favorite and cherished measure of the Whigs. But, by abuses of Executive power, which they cannot control, they are unable to retain that measure without refusing to pass an adequate Tariff, now imperiously demanded by the dishonored credit of the Government and the ruined condition of the country. We will hereafter, said he, redeem from the spoilers the proceeds of our lands: but, for the present, and in this great emergency, we will not refuse to our suffering country the good that it is now in our power to do. For this patriotic purpose we consent, for a moment, to forget ourselves, our wrongs, and our just resentments. Never did the great Whig party present itself in a more enviable and sublime point of view than it now does, when yielding under present circumstances to the sacrifices which they are called upon to make. It is for their country that they yield. Victorious over all opponents, and now victorious over themselves, they proudly lay down upon the altar of their country the trophies which they won in the great campaign of 1840."

[COMMUNICATED.]

Well, after a long and arduous session, Congress has adjourned. An eventful session it has been. From the beginning to the end, it was surrounded with difficulties, and after all, much useful legislation has been accomplished. Many valuable laws to secure the prosperty of the people, and the peace of the nation have been passed. The Whigs have manfully done their duty, and they will receive the pleasing welcome, 'well done good and faithful servants.' If we look at the conduct of the Whigs in Congress, they have, as far as they have been able, fulfilled their pledges. They have been true to themselves, to their cause, and to their constituents. They have acted with fidelity, with firmness, and patriotism.—They have nothing to deplore, nothing to regret. Vexed, harassed and embarassed they marched boldly on in discharge of their duty, having only one object in view, the good of their country. All their measures have been directed to that single end, and the people with an approving voice will confirm their judgments. The Whig party, is a powerful party; it contains many distinguished men of talent and virtue. It professes to be governed by the dictates of the loftiest patriotism.—Its end and aim, the lasting prosperity of the nation, whether it regards the army, the navy, the judiciary, or the revenue. In their action towards these departments, the Whigs have been guided by those lights which wisdom and experience have furnished. They have adopted what they deemed the best policy for the nation. By the adoption of the Whig policy, the country must inevitably flourish. No other can suit this nation. Under the Whig policy, our country has reached its high standing among the nations of the earth. Its commerce has become expanded, the arts increased, manufactures have flourished.

We have not only become independent in a great measure, as it regards our supplies from other nations, but are rendering other nations tributary to us. Besides the great wealth which a superabundant agriculture furnishes, for exportations, that of manufactures is also great. And if the Whig policy had not been unfortunately checked in its prosperous career, the country would have advanced to a higher state of greatness than it is at present. The object of the Whigs has been to renovate the drooping energies of the nation, and to restore it to its proper and rightful state, and in this effort we believe the party will and must triumph. No other policy than theirs will suit a free people. It is liberal, enlarged, and directed by the most enlightened views which the wisdom of the most experienced and practical statesmen can furnish. Under the Whig policy the country grew and prospered. Under the contrary policy it would sink and perish; its ancient glory would be tarnished, its ancient prosperity would only be found in its past records.

These are serious reflections for the people, for a free people to weight. They have to decide the question whether this nation shall continue to advance in greatness, or to sink to nothingness. A free people will not hesitate which of the two to choose.

ALEXANDRIA, D. C.

MONDAY MORNING, SEPT. 5.

THE CORRESPONDENCE.—The New York Courier and Enquirer has commenced the publication of the Correspondence between Lord Ashburton and Mr. Webster. The letter spublished, that we have read, are long and refer entirely to the metes, bounds, and lines of North Eastern Boundary. The spirit in which the Correspondence commenced and the negotiations were carried on, may be gathered from a passage in one of Lord Ashburton's notes, in which he says to Mr. Webster, "I trust, sir, that you will have perceived in the course of my hitherto informal communications with you, that I approach my duties generally without any of those devices and manœuvres which are supposed, I believe ignorantly, to be the useful tools of ordinary diplomacy. With a person of your penetration they would avail as little as they would with the intelligent public of the two great, enlightened countries of whose interests we are treating. I know no other mode of acting than an open, plain dealing."

This feeling Mr. Webster reciprocates heartily, and the negotiators then set to work like business men, to arrange the disputed lines, and to make a satisfactory adjustment of the difficulties connected with the disputed territory. The notes which passed, show an intimate acquaintance with the subject, on the part of both negotiators, and an earnest desire, also, on both sides, to support the rights of their respective countries. As the result attained, has been satisfactory to the States immediately concerned, and to the Government of the United States, it will not be necessary for us to publish this part of the correspondence.

Many who are not partizans, and can never be, and who turn generally with indifference or disgust, from mere party politics, are yet deeply interested, at the present time, in the election of Henry Clay, as next President of the United States; and feel anxious to promote his success by every honorable means. They admit the force of the maxim of Lord Bacon, "that it is in vain to consult of matters, if we do not consult of persons also,—for matters are nothing but dead images, but the execution of affairs, consists in the choice of persons." The man, who is so emphatically, "fortunæ faber ipse suæ," is the one now to originate and carry out whatever measures will be conducive to the interests and happiness of his country. And he is as quick to conceive, as he is prompt to execute. Promptness, energy, and decision, are what we now want in our Chief Magistrate. Mr. Madison, during the late war, always thought, and said, that Mr. Clay would have made a great commander. His friends never, it is true, intimated, as the flatterers of another distinguished man said of their favorite that he "was born to command." But they are confident, that in the highest civil capacity under our Constitution, he would exhibit those traits which he has constantly shown in every situation in which he has been placed, and which prove him to be unrivalled in all the qualities which should distinguish a governor among a free people.

Some days ago, it was reported by the Locofoco presses, that MR. CLAY, the Dictator, had written letters to his friends in Congress, advising the passage of the Tariff Bill, and that it was under his advice that the Whigs acted. Now, the Madisonian says, that Mr. Clay wrote "eleven letters" advising his friends to adjourn and go home and "leave the Captain to his fate." These contradictory statements show the truth of the tales set afloat!

The dinner given in New York by the Merchants and others, to Lord Ashburton was a splendid affair. We publish in another column, Lord Ashburton's speech on that occasion.

We stand uncommitted to any candidate for the Presidency—and we mean to remain so.—Rich. Enq.

How long, pray?

LATER FROM CANTON.—By the arrival of the Horatio, Capt. Howland, of New York from Canton, 17th of May, files of the Canton Register, and Macao Price Current, have been received.

The British appear to be prosecuting the war with great spirit.

Capt. Kearney has made a formal demand for indemnity, for the losses sustained by American citizens, but the result was not known. The Boston had left for Manilla.

It is stated that Com. Hull will not accept the appointment which has been tendered him of the command of the ships afloat in Boston harbor.

The Boston Evening Journal says that Com. Morris has been ordered to proceed from the Brazils to the Mediterranean, to assume the command on that station.

The Georgetown Advocate says that the cost of repairing the whole of the damage done to the Chesapeake and Ohio canal by the late freshet, will not exceed eight thousand dollars. The cost of putting the canal in navigable order will be about $2,500.

In the Report of the Select Committee of the House of Representatives, on the case of Sylvester, we find the following.

But, whatever other reasons may have operated in the removal of Sylvester, it is not to be doubted that the ordinary one, of making a place for a political friend and par isan, had its full force. His successor is Mr. F. H. Davidge, whose name had been before the President for an appointment since the 4th of March, 1841. John B. Jones, editor of the Madisonian, proves that Mr. Davidge had been writing for his paper; and that some of his contributions were on hand when he received this appointment, and were afterwar !s inserted; but that the President then requested him to dispense with the further services of Mr. Davidge as a writer for the Madisonian, which he did. Here is the mode by which office seekers qualify themselves for places under this Administration. They come to this city, and have their names thrown before the President for an appointment; they commence writing for the Madisonian, under his surveillance, and, after having gone through the proper probation, and established their fitness for office by inditing stupid panegyrics upon the President, and coarse ribaldry upon the majority in Congress, to be published in the court journal, are duly installed into place. Is such the purpose for which the offices of this Government were created; and such the principle upon which they are to be filled? What becomes of the message of the President, and of his proclamation, through the Secretary of State, against the interference of all office-holders in politics? Where is the potency of his emphatic quotation to them, forbidding active partisanship—"thus far thou comest, but no farther!" Mr. Davidge entered a novice into the Pension Bureau, and merely performs a portion of the duties which had been previously done by another clerk, Evans; and the only result of his labors is to relieve Evans of an occasional press of business; yet he receives a salary of $1400, and Evans but $1,200. It appears also, that a son of Mr. Davidge has received a clerkship in one of the departments.

ANOTHER ENGLISH STAR EXPECTED.—The English papers contain certain accounts of the "Oratorical and Poetical Soirees" of Professor Greenbank, which lately have been given under the auspices of the Society for the diffusion of Useful Knowledge, assisted by his son and two pupils The last of these, given at Wigan, consisted of speeches, dialogues, poetical extracts and anecdotes.

The Liverpool Chronicle says:

"All were good, and given with excellent grace and action; indeed the speech of P. Henry, the orator of the American Independence, in the hands of Mr. Greenbank, was truly an incomparable piece of eloquence, and the audience during its delivery were almost paralyzed, and at its conclusion, a round of applause was given which made the room shake again, fully proving that not only the style of delivery, but also that the sentiment of the matter, was fully acquiesced in. At the conclusion of the entertainments, the worthy gentleman announced it to be his intention, in a few days to leave his native country on a visit to our trans-atlantic brethren, and on his return he hoped to have the pleasure again of visiting Wigan, and describing his ideas of the Americans and their manners in a course of lectures."

The Young Literati, having digested their Boz dinner, must get ready to give another entertainment, to furnish Mr. Greenbank with matter for those promised lectures. His ideas upon the subject of "manners" of Americans must be stuffed into him, or they will lack much originality and poignancy.—Bostor. Cour

THE FISHERIES.—We regret to learn that the Newfoundland cod fishery, which has for many years proved a never failing source from which many of our hardy and industrious population on the seabord have obtained supplies, will this year prove exceedingly unprofitable. Accounts from Newfoundland also state that that the codfishery has been very unsuccessful in that quarter also, and a late Cape Breton paper says: "The fisheries will this year turn out almost a total failure. On some parts of the coast the take has been literally nothing."—Bos. Merc. Jour.

[COMMMUNICATED.]

'The body and mind" says Sterne, "are like a jerkin and its lining. If you rumple the one, you rumple the other." The truth of which, was naturally and strikingly illustrated in the eloquent lecture, delivered by the Rev. Mr. Sheldon, on Thursday evening, in the Methodist Episcopal Church. There can be no doubt that all intelligent hearers felt, that they possessed a living interest in the beautiful prospect, presented for their contemplations.

The true patriot, the philanthropist, and the christian, were alike invited to anticipate an improved state of the moral, physical and intellectual faculties. The delights of literature and science, were laid within the precints of the cottage door, and there made to supply the place of those mere sensual pleasures now so universally connected with ignorance and vice. His ingenuous arguments and happy anecdotes, in favor of the refining and tranquilizing influences of high toned moral feeling, were truly characteristic of the mighty scheme.—In short, his great purpose was to urge his fellow beings to seek the benefit of a complete education, and as Dr. Channing says, "make man a master of himself, to excite him to act from a principle in his own mind, to lead him to propose his own perfection as his supreme law and end."

Blessed will the day, be, when we shall see so powerful an engine as his Village Lyceums, rising up in our land and consecrating their energies to the enlightning and developing the important faculties of man.

A friend to Education.

[It will be seen by a notice in the Gazette of to-day, that the lecture on Moral, Intellectual, and Physical education, referred to in the above communication, is to be repeated in the Lyceum Hall, on to-morrow evening at 7½ o'clock.]

COMMUNICATED.

As two ladies and a gentleman, were passing up King street, on Thursday night, the 1st instant, some person or persons, secretly concealed, threw a mixture, supposed to be Indigo and Vitriol, upon the ladies, to the destruction of one of their dresses, and the partial injury of the other, and as the writer of this was shown the dress, he thinks it best to communicate this circumstance, that our citizens may be on their guard against any repetition of such outrageous and scandalous behaviour.

TARIFF AND REVENUE.—There will now, we believe, be a new issue of Treasury notes, amounting to about six millions. And it is probable that before the fourth of March next, Government, notwithstanding the economy forced upon it by the Whigs of Congress, will be in want of further aid. This state of things is not the result of Mr. Tyler's management or mismanagement, but is a part of the legacy of evil bequeathed by Gen. Jackson, and transmitted unimpaired by Mr. Van Buren The economy of a single year will scarcely supply the deficiencies of twelve years' prodigality; nor, indeed, can the habits of office holders, vitiated by twelve years, be so suddenly corrected. The work has been commenced—there is evidence of convalescence. Let us hope that restoration is not distant. Meantime, economy must be the order of the day. Congress cannot, indeed prevent the evil proposed by the exchange of good public servants for indifferent ones, but it may make the evil as short as possible.

U. S. Gazette.

The Southwestern counties of Virginia seem to be in a very distressed condition. A meeting is called at Wythe C. H. for the purpose of adopting such remedies for the hard times as may seem expedient. And in Smyth, measures have been adopted by which no person in that county will bid for property offered under execution."

By advices received from the United States brigantine Boxer, Lieutenant Commanding Oscar Bullus, we were apprised of and announced her arrival at Pensacola on the 18th instant. We regret to learn that much sickness prevails among her officers and crew, attributable to exposure consequent upon the activity and unceasing duties of the brig during her recent cruise of four months. In that time she has completely scoured the Gulf of Mexico and Caribbean Sea, affording much service to our commerce, and imparting confidence to our citizens residing in the many foreign ports she has visited. Rest and change of climate, it is believed, will shortly enable the Boxer to resume her labors.

OPENING ANOTHER'S LETTER.—Matthew Lacour, a manufacturer of locofoco matches, at No. 44 Staten street, New York, was arrested on the 30th ult. by the U. S. Marshal, charged by John H. Stevens, also a manufacturer of the same kind of matches, formerly doing business in the same place, with opening a letter mailed at Philadelphia, and directed to him, containing an order for $50 worth of matches, which order Lacor filled in compliance with its requirements. He was held to bail in the sum of $1000, which he procured and was liberated. The punishment in case of conviction for this offence, is imprisonment for not more than ten, nor less than two years.

MR. TYLER AND THE LOCO FOCOS.—The New York Plebeian, (the organ of the New York Loco Focos,) thus discourses of Mr. Tyler and his affiliated presses: "The extreme modesty of the Tyler press, in speaking of the recent elections as indications in favor of the "Captain," reminds us of the church warden's wife, who went to church for the first time in her life, when her husband was church warden, and, being somewhat late, the congregation was getting up from their knees at the same time she entered, and she said, with a sweet condescending smile, "Pray keep your seats, ladies and gentlemen; I think no more of myself, than I did before."

DIED,

At Woodbury, his late residence, in the county of Fairfax, Virginia, on Tuesday, the 23d ult, Doctor MOTTROM BALL, in the 75th year of his age. Doctor Ball exhibited in his character a rare combination of acomplishments, united with the most solid virtues; kind, courteous, and affable, no one ever formed his acquaintance who did not accord to him the voluntary homage of admiration and esteem.

Born in the county of Northumberland, Va., of highly respectable and opulent parentage, he was sent to Scotland at an early age, where, at the institutions of Glasgow and Edinburgh, he acquired a solid classical and medical education. The evidence of worth which shone so conspicuously in his after life was here developed, and drew around him, in a land of strangers, a band of warm and devoted friends, at the head of which stood Professor William Hambleton. He returned to the United States about the year 1790, and commenced the practice of medicine in his native country. His fame as a physician extended in a short time to the surrounding counties, and for a period of twenty-four years he was actively engaged in a laborious practice over a widely extended field. In 1814, (his property being devastated by the British,) to provide for the safety of his family, he left the county of Northumberland, followed by the regrets of those who had so often been benefited by his skill, and with a professional reputation equalled only by their admiration of his character as a man. He settled in the county of Fairfax, where, uhtil the period of his demise, he continued to dispense to a large circle of his friends and neighbors the blessings of his professional skill and the endearing offices of friendship. It is no fiction—Dr. Ball lived and died without having made an enemy, and the rich consolations of Christianity vouchsafed to him in his dying hour, offorded a striking exemplification of the saying of the great and good Dr. Boerhaave, that the poor were his best patients, for God was their paymaster. M.

On Thursday, the 25th of August, at the residence of her father, Maj. John White, SARAH HEISKELL, widow of the late John Heiskell, Esq., aged forty-nine years and three months, leaving a son and two daughters to mourn their irreparable loss. Mrs. Heiskell having been a native of Frederick county, and having lived many years in Winchester, was well known to the people of that region, and was much esteemed for her good sense, and her amiable, kind, and affectionate disposition.

In Georgetown, on Tuesday morning last, at 4 o'clock, after a long and painful illness, which she bore with Christian meekness, Mrs. HARRIET SMOOT, relict of Dr. Chas. Smoot, late of Charles county Md. in the 58th year of her age.

BRANDETH'S PILLS.

THE New York Sun says: BRANDRETH'S PILLS have been used among many of our friends and in our own family we have used them nearly four years when we required medicine; in that period, no Doctor save Mr. Brandreth has crossed our threshold, and no medicine besides the Doctor's Pills used. Our belief is 'keep your bowels and blood pure,' and every kind of disease will be prevented or cured. The Brandreth Pills are eminently calculated to do this, and thereby much lesser the sum of human misery.

The New York Evening Star says: Brandreth's Pills are a medicine which their own intense worth will always secure for them a large and ready sale.--They have deservedly a high reputation; and as a family and anti-bilious remedy it would be difficult to equal them among all the patent medicines of the present day.

The New York Commercial says: They remove all morbid humors and purify the blood.

To the whole family of Man.—We feel both pleasure and satisfaction in recommending to all our readers, Brandreth's Vegetable Pills, as the most certain, most safe, and invaluable medicine extant. As antibilious and aperient Pills, we are perfectly convinced they tand far above all others; as a certain cure in all cases of worms, scurvy, scorbutic humors, erysipelas, and all affections of the skin, dropsy, asthma, stone, gravel, piles, and lumbago, they will be found invaluable.—London Times.

DR. LEIDY'S MEDICATED SARSAPARILLA.

BEING a concentrated fluid extract of Sarsaparilla, combined with other vegetable extracts which renders it a medicine of great utility in the cure of all diseases arising from impurities of the blood—from indiscretions and imprudencies of youth, and constitutional diseases formed or produced by the injudicious use of mercury, arsenic, bark or quinine. It is an invaluable remedy for all Rheumatic Affections, General Debility, Ulcerous Sores, White Swellings, Diseases of the Liver and Skin, Ulcerated Sore Throat, Ulcers of the Nose, Caries, or diseases of the Bones, Scrofula, or King's Evil, Erysipelas, or St. Anthony's fire, and all the unpleasant and dangerous affections consequent on Syphilis, Lues, Venereal, &c., &c. As a general purifier of the blood at all times, and particularly in the spring and fall, there can be no medicine more effectual.

As a medicine calculated to soothe and nourish the system, after having been under medical treatment for any particular disease there can be nothing more adapted, restoring the natural vigour of the system and allaying the debilitated and nervous condition of the system so common after sickness.

As a medicine for its remedial virtues in all the above mentioned diseases and affections, there is no preparation more efficacious; and is warranted to possess all the boasted virtues contained in the PANACEAS, CATHOLICONS, EXTRACTS, &c. From a discovery made by the Proprietors, there is a combination of certain vegetable extracts, with the Sarsaparilla, (that adds greatly to its virtues,) found in this medicine, which justifies the Proprietors in pronouncing it paramount to other preparations.

This preparation will be found highly serviceable during the summer season, as a preventive of those unpleasant and disagreeable sensations so common to many during warm weather, namely Faintness, Giddiness, Oppressive Feeling about the region of the Heart and on the Breast, Dimness of Vision, &c. &c. It forms a delightful and wholesome beverage, by adding a table spoonful to a glass of fresh spring or ice water, similar to the celebrated Lisbon diet drink; and with a small quantity of sugar or simple syrup, forms the Sarsaparilla mead, possessing, however, in addition, medicinal virtues conducive to health, and particularly adapted to invalids. For travelling persons it is a requisite of great importance.

TO THE LADIES.

INTELLECTUAL Development and Personal Beauty, considered in connexion with Dr. FELIX GOURAUD'S POUDRES SUBTILES. The sculptor, whose study is to imitate the exquisite workmanship of nature, pourtrays in his model of the human form a broad and elevated forehead. This development is not only consonant with, but sometimes necessary to the possession of a high order of mental faculty. If a fine forehead is a mark of intellect, it is no less an essential element of personal beauty, and it is of importance to those, and there are many such possessed of this prominent feature though obscured by the encroachments of a too luxurious growth of hair, to remove that portion of an excrescence which tends, in their case, only to deform. This can be done safely, speedy, effectually, and if used in accordance with directions, without the least inconvenience, by Dr. Felix Gouraud's Depilatory Powders. The furz on the chin, when annoying, or the short hair on the back of a lady's neck, when too apparent—the hair of a mole, or the beard, when high upon the cheek, may all be removed and eventually the roots destroyed by the use of this preparation.
Manufactured by Dr. Felix Govraud, 67 Walker street, one door from Broadway, N. Y., and for sale in this city, by his sole agent, Mr. A. S. JORDAN, 2 Milk, 1st door from Washington street. ☞$1 per bottle.

FOR THE SKIN AND COMPLEXION.

TO heal Harsh, Rough, and Chapped Skin, and render it beautifully soft, Dr. Felix Gouraud's EAU DE BEAUTE possesses properties of surprising energy, in producing delicate white neck, hands and arms, and protecting them from the solar heat. Its soothing and ameliorating properties immediately allay the smarting irritation of the skin produced by the sting of musquitoes, or other causes, assuages inflammation, removes cutaneous eruptions, pimples, blotches, tan and redness, by its dilating properties it stops the formation of wrinkles, and banishes them when present, and elicits a beautiful juvenile appearance. To be had no where else in New York but at 67 Walker street, 1 door from the corner of Broadway. $1 per bottle.
CAUTION.—See that 'Eau de Beaute, fabrique par Dr Felix Gouraud, New York,' is blown in the four sides of each bottle.
Beware of spurious imitations of this celebrated cosmetic, of the most deleterious character, containing mineral astringents utterly ruinous to the complexion, and by their repellant action endangering health.
DR FELIX GOURAUD'S SUPERIOR VEGETABLE ROGUE is composed materially from flowers and simples, an article which, from its perfect assimilation with the skin, and its correctness and permanency of tint, gives to the countenance a bloom impossible, on the closest inspection, to detect from nature; and is warranted free from any mineral substance and immoveable by perspiration, or rubbing with a handkerchief. 50 cents per bottle. WORTH NOTICING.

THE following letter from the Rev. J. W. Sawyer, of Shaftsbury, Vermont, in confirmation of the virtues of Dr. Jayne's Hair Tonic is from so good a source, and so strong a voucher for the article, that we give it to our readers. If any of them are similarly afflicted, they will thank us for the information, as none are disposed to consider baldness an addition to personal beauty. Where a remedy is really good, it should be universally known, while all quackery should meet a prompt exposure.

Shaftsbury, Bennington Co. Vt. }
Aug. 4th, 1840. }

DR D. JAYNE:—DEAR SIR—Learning through the medium of the newspapers the efficacy of your HAIR TONIC, and being acquainted with some of those recommending it, to wit: Rev. C. C. Park, Rev. Dr. Babcock, and Rev. L. Fletcher, and when in New York last spring, I purchased two bottles, with a view to make the experiment. I have been quite bald for about four years, and obliged to wear a wig. Indeed, it is constitutional with my family to be bald in early life. I confess, I had but little confidence in the attempt, having been so bald, and near 46 years of age, and that part of my head destitute of hair exceedingly smooth. I however, commenced agreeably to your directions, and used one bottle faithfully, and with very little effect but before I had used the second bottle, a very fine fuzzy hair became perceptible, which continued to grow, and now having used the third bottle, I have had three cuttings performed, and the prospect is very flattering, that I shall again be blessed with a fine head of hair ornamental and useful. I am extremely gratified with the prospect, and from observations made, many of my friends, and acquaintances, who have heretofore regarded the preparation as deceptive, and only a catch penny concern, are now well satisfied that it is "Truth—No Fiction." J. W. LAWYER.
Prepared only by Dr D. Jayne, No. 20 South Third Street, Philadelphia. Price $1.
Messrs. Wm. Stabler, and Co. are my agents in Alexandria for the sale of the above article. D. JAYNE.

TO THE BALD HEADED AND OTHERS

DOES any know a neighbor or a friend who has been Bald, and whose head is now covered with fine hair? One whose coat collar was covered with dandruff, though brushed every hour—which has now vanished entirely? Or one whose hairs at early age were turning grey, who now has not a grey hair?—Children whose heads were covered with scruf,—whose hair would not grow, that are now growing the fullest crops of hair? Some cases must be known to most persons. Ask them the cause, and you will be told, these things have been done by the use of the BALM OF COLUMBIA. Of 20 years growth is this article, its demand increasing annually some hundred per cent.—though when discovered not opposed by any thing for the same purpose now assailed by almost numberless mushroom trash preparations that will ruin the hair if used to any extent. Can more than these facts be wanted—refer to the recommendations by a list of names of respectability, unequalled by any other article. Look to these things—buy this article. Stay and preserve your hair by its use, or if bald restore it. Ladies, attend to this—hundreds in fashionable life are using it as the toilet. Long hair is very apt to fall out. Ladies, use the Balm of Columbia in time to save yourselves the disgrace of baldness by neglect of your persons.
It is your duty, as moralists to preserve the beauties of nature, with which a bountiful Creator has endowed you—use the Balm, for it will do it.
CAUTION TO BE REMEMBERED.
—Several most flagrant attempts have been made to counterfeit the true Balm of Columbia. Some of the impostors have gone so far as to counterfeit the splendid wrappers, and the Falls of Niagara, and every external mark except the name of Comstock, which they dare not forge.
To avoid impositions therefore, always look for the name of Comstock & Co. or L. S. Comstock, and never buy the article unless it has that name upon it.
Sold Wholesale and Retail, only at No. 2 Fletcher street, N. Y.
From the Boston Chronicle, Jan. 10.
☞We see by an advertisement in another column that Messrs. Comstock and Co., the authorized Agents for Oldridge's balm of Columbia, have deputies to sell that article in Boston and elsewhere.—We know a lady of this city whose hair was so nearly gone as to expose entirely her phrenological developments, which, considering that they betokened a most amiable disposition, was not in reality very unfortunate. Nevertheless she mourned the loss of locks that she had worn, and, after a year's fruitless resort to miscalled restoratives, purchased, some months ago, a bottle or two of Oldridge's Balm, and she has now ringlets in rich profusion, glossy, and of raven blackness. We are not puffing—none of the commodity has been sent to us, and, indeed, we do not want any, for though we were obliged to wear a wig a year ago, we have now, through its virtue, hair enough, and of a passable quality, of our own.
Daring Fraud. The Balm of Columbia has been imitated by a notorious counterfeiter. Let it never be purchased or used unless it have the name of L. S. COMSTOCK, or the signature of COMSTOCK & Co. on a splendid wrapper. This is the only external test that will secure the public from deception.

WHO WILL GO BALD?

COLONEL SEAVER, Postmaster at Batavia, is knowing to the fact, that Dr. Bingham, of Genessee county aged over 70, and for more than 17 years very bald, has had his hair fully restored by the use of one bottle of the Balm of Columbia from COMSTOCK & CO.

JAYNE'S INDIAN EXPECTORANT

IS RECOMMENDED as decidedly superior to any other known combination of Medicine, for Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Consumption, Asthma, spitting of Blood, Hoarseness, Difficulty of Breathing, Hooping Cough, Pain, and Weakness of the Breast, and all diseases of the Pulmonary organs.
This medicine is highly and justly recommended, by numerous and respectable individuals, who have found relief from its use. Many who have been laboring under protracted Coughs and pains in the breast and have been supposed by themselves and their friends far advanced in consumption, have been happily restored to perfect health by the use of this valuable Expectorant.
Persons laboring under chronic or consumptive coughs, will find great advantage from carrying a small quantity of the Indian Expectorant with them, while attending to their various avocations, and taking a teaspoonful occasionally. Their cough will be scarcely felt and they will be enabled to expectorate with the greatest facility, and the irritating matter will thereby soon be removed and a permanent cure effected.—Let the afflicted try it.
Prepared only by Dr. D. Jayne of Salem, New Jersey, and none is genuine without his written signature to the label on the outside of the bottle.

CERTIFICATES.

I hereby certify that I was cured of a violent cough and pain in the breast by using Doctor Jayne's Expectorant Medicine. My wife also was afflicted with a bad cough and pain in the breast, attended with so much difficulty of breathing as to prevent her from getting any sleep for a number of nights in succession, but by taking two doses of this medicine she was enabled to sleep quietly through the night and in a few days by continuing its use she was perfectly restored.
JACOB RIDGEWAY.
Hancock's Bridge, N. J. Sep. 24, 1836.

From the Rev. C. C. P. Crosby, late agent of the American Baptist.

To Dr. D. Jayne. Dear sir: I have made use of the Indian Expectorant, personally and in my family for the last six years with great benefit. Indeed I may consider my life prolonged by the use of this valuable medicine, under the blessing of God, for several years. I may say almost as much in the case of my wife and also of the Rev. Mr. Tinson of the Island of Jamaica. For all cases of cough, inflamation of the chest, lungs and throat, I do most unhesitatingly recommend this as the best medicine I have ever tried. My earnest wish is that others afflicted as I have been, may experience the same relief, which I am persuaded they will by using the Indian Expectorant. C. C. P. CROSBY.
N. B. Many of my neighbors, on my recommendation, have tried this medicine with uniform success.

Doct. D. Jayne—Dear sir: I was for a long time afflicted with a violent cough and difficulty of breathing, attended with weakness and pain in my breast, but have been restored to perfect health by using one bottle of your Indian Expectorant. I have been subject to a cough and pain in my breast for near twenty years, and have found far greater benefit from this medicine than from any other. I remain, respectfully, yours,

SUMMER COMPLAINT.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTARY, and all other derangements of the Stomach and Bowels, are effectually cured by Dr. Jayne's Carminative Balsam.

Dr. D. Jayne—Dear Sir,—Having made use of your Carminative Balsam in my family, and finding it to be admirably adapted to the complaints for which it is intended, I take pleasure in recommending it to the use of my friends and the public generally, believing those who are afflicted with any of these complaints will find relief in the use of this valuable medicine. JONATHAN GOING. D. D.
President of Granville College, Ohio.

Baltimore, March 27, 1833.

Dr. Jayne.—Dear Sir. You ask me what proofs I meet with of the efficacy of your medicine. I can safely say that I never prescribed a medicine for Bowel Complaints that has given me so much satisfaction, and my patients so speedy and perfect relief as this. Whenever introduced into a family, it becomes a standing remedy for those ailments, and is called for again and again, which I think a pretty good proof of its efficacy and usefulness; in the Summer Complaint of children it has frequently appeared to snatch the little victims as it were, from the grave. It saved the life of my child, and of such and such a child I have repeatedly heard said: In dysenteric affections of adults, I have time and again seen it act like a charm, and give permanent relief in a few hours—I may say in a few minutes. In fine it is a valuable medicine, and no family should be without it. Respectfully,
M. L. KNAPP, M. D.
Late Physician to the Baltimore Dispensary and agent for the Maryland Vaccine Institution.

HANCE'S COMPOUND SYRUP OF HOREHOUND.

FOR the Cure of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Spitting of Blood, Pain and Oppression of the Breast, and all Diseases arising from a Disordered Condition of the Lungs.
Perhaps there is no Medical Observation better established, and none more generally confirmed by the experience of the best physicians of all ages in all countries, than the Fact, that many of the most difficult and incurable Consumptions originate in neglected colds. In a climate so variable as ours, where the changes of weather are frequently sudden and unexpected, it requires more care and attention to guard against this dangerous enemy to human life, than most persons are able and willing to bestow. The bills of mortality exhibit the alarming and most melancholy fact, that the number of deaths, by this disease are as five to one. Inasmuch then as this fatal disease is increasing and spreading so widely and fearfully, and bidding defiance often to the combined skill of the most eminent physicians, it is a gratification to the proprietor to be enabled to offer to all of consumptive habits, or those afflicted with distressing pains in the side or breast, or any affection of the breast or lungs, a reasonable and almost certaian prospect of relief.
The virtues of Horehound for arresting the progress of cough and consumption, have been universally known since the discovery of America. The Indians so celebrated for curing all diseases with herbs, used very extensively the Horehound, in all cases of Colds, Coughs, &c. It is to them that we are indebted for the knowledge we have of this valuable remedy, and did we use it as freely and promptly as those uncivilized beings, the list of deaths from consumption, would be comparatively small, to what it is at present. "An Indian never was known to die with Consumption," because they always take such remedies as arrest the disease in time; consequently being free from diseases of the lungs, they are the heartiest race of persons in the world.
The Compound Syrup of Horehound is a medicine suitable to persons of all ages and sexes; and if taken on the appearance of the first symptoms which are a cough or pain in the breast, will in nine cases out of ten, afford relief and effect a speedy cure.

SARSAPARILLA, VEGETABLE OR BLOOD PILLS.

FOR purifying the blood, removing bile, correcting all disorders of the stomach and bowels, costiveness, dyspepsia, swimming in the head, &c. Persons of a full habit, who are subject to headache, giddiness, drowsiness, and singing in the ears, arising from too great a flow of blood to the head, should never be without them, as many dangerous symptoms will be entirely carried off by their immediate use.
For Females, these Pills are most truly excellent; removing all obstructions, the distressing headache so very prevalent with the sex; depression of spirits, dullness of sight, nervous affections, blotches, pimples and sallowness of the skin, and give a healthy and juvenile bloom to the complexion.
As a pleasant, safe, easy aperient, they unite the recommendation of a mild opreation, with the most successful effect, and require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use. By regulating the dose according to the age and strength of the patient, they become suitable for every case, in either sex, that can be required; and for elderly people they will be found to be the most comfortable medicine hitherto prepared.
